II. How We Use Cookies and Similar Tracking Technologies

1. What are cookies and similar tracking technologies?

(1) Cookies

Cookies are text files containing small piece of data that are downloaded to your browser or device when you visit a certain web address, and can be recalled by a web server in the domain that placed the cookie. This data often consists of a string of numbers and letters that uniquely identifies your device, but it can contain other information as well. Some cookies are placed by third parties acting on our behalf.

Cookies can remain on your device for different periods of time. Some Cookies are “session” Cookies, meaning that they exist only while your browser or the application is open. These Cookies are deleted automatically once you close your browser or application. Other Cookies are called “persistent” Cookies. The length of time a persistent Cookie stays on your device varies from Cookie to Cookie. They can be used to recognize your device when you open and use the websites again.

(2) Web beacons

Some of our webpages contain electronic tags known as web beacons (such as pixel tags, clear GIFs, JavaScript, and local storage, also known as “tracking pixels”) that we use to help deliver cookies on our websites, count users who have visited those websites, and deliver co-branded products (if any). We also include web beacons or similar tracking technologies in our electronic communications to determine whether you open and act on them.

(3) Other similar tracking technologies

In addition to standard cookies and web beacons, our Services may also use other similar tracking technologies to store and read data files on your device. This is typically done to maintain your preferences or to improve speed and performance by storing certain files locally. But, like standard cookies, these tracking technologies can also store a unique identifier for your device, which can then track behavior.

(4) Third party cookies

Finally, our Services may contain standard cookies, web beacons or similar tracking technologies (collectively, “Cookies”) from third-party analytics providers, which help us compile aggregated statistics about the effectiveness of our promotional campaigns or other operations. These technologies enable the analytics providers to set or read their own cookies or other identifiers on your device, through which they can collect information about your use of our website and other Services, including your IP address, web browser, mobile network information, pages viewed, time spent on pages or in apps, links clicked and conversion information. However, we prohibit these analytics providers from using web beacons on our sites to collect or access information that directly identifies you (such as your name or email address).

If you would like more information about the types of cookies or similar technologies we use, how we utilize them, and the methods for controlling your cookies, please click here.
